Don't Be Slave To Habit

Follow Regime That Suits You Best

EXPERIMENT IF NEED BE

It is frequently said: "I have been doing this and thus for years, and there still seems to be no improvement. Does it mean that the preparations I am using are at fault?"

There is no reason for it to mean anything of the sort. Because you decide to give up apples and take to oranges instead, it is not to say that the apples are no good; only that oranges suit you better at the moment.

Very much the same sort of thing applies to the skin. If it is responding well to the things you are using, continue with them by all means. If, on the other hand, it is off colour, then it is time to make a change. Some slight alteration may be all that is necessary.

Suppose, for instance, that you have been cleansing with soap and water; try a cleansing cream instead. Quite likely it will cure the dryness that has been worrying you.

If you have been using a cream powder base, to which, in your case, the make-up refuses to stick, then try a liquid one. You may find that this will produce the matt surface that you have been longing for.

SPOTTED MUSLIN

Nursery Pinaflore To Evening Frock

Spotted muslin has grown up from the nursery "pinny" state to the importance of evening frocks, and very attractive it looks, trimmed with wide black insertion for the sophisticated or small white lace frills for the debutante.

Very lovely this for the young bud, and just the sort of frock a fond father likes to see his youngest daughter in.

The check pattern enhances the flowing lines of this charming frock, while the only ornamentation is a single rose worn at the waist.

Black & Blue Still Popular

Must Be Enlivened With White

BLACK AND RED ALSO STRIKING

Black is as popular, and as chic as ever. So, too, is navy, but they must both be gayed up with white. A white flower, a white front, or an extravagantly large white bow, is poised like a butterfly on the shoulder or at the neck.

Like the "something blue, something new" for the bride, white must be included somewhere for the smart woman.

Flowers are still made of organdie (light as thistle-down), or pique. But the latest are of white leather. Some of these are made into necklaces that hang round the throat like a daisy-chain.

Sometimes a black frock will desert white and take to red—a red flower and a red belt, with lips reddened to match. Very striking for a dress or suit that might otherwise be too sober.

WASHING MEN'S COLLARS

How To Hang Out To Dry

When washing men's collars, thread them through the stud-hole on to a piece of tape, and hang to dry suspended from this; they are prevented from being pulled out of shape, and marks from the line or a peg are avoided.

Frigorous Hats GLITTERING EVENING ENSEMBLE

Latest Developments In Headgear

FLOWERS AND FEATHERS

Hats do not pretend to be anything but deliciously frivolous. Sometimes they are not even hats at all!

A flat bunch of violets, like a small plate, perched on the side of the head in the manner of a musical comedy paragon's cap; an ostrich feather curling up from the back of the head and over the forehead—these have the charm of feminine irresponsibility and are described as "model hats."

Little hats made of small white petals are much in favour, and give a fresh, flower-like look to a fair head. Sometimes white feathers are used instead; these, too, are highly becoming.

STRIKING FASHION IN EARRINGS

Worn Through Hair Drawn Over Ears

A beautiful woman was the "cynosure of every eye" at a supper-party in London recently. She was elegantly exotic, her waxen skin in striking contrast to her black hair, which she wore with becoming severity parted in the centre, drawn quite low over her ears, and knotted in the nape of her neck.

And she had allowed her large pearl earrings to slip through the shining black wing of hair on each side.

Another woman who adopted the same idea was Anna Pavlova, to whom this woman bore a distinct resemblance.

Her perfume was in perfect harmony with her personality. It was the scent of the tobacco-plant, the flower that gleams luminously white in dusky summer gardens.

CAPES OF RUSSIAN ERMINE

Scarf fastenings are used on coats and capes. A short cape of Russian ermine dips below the waistline at the back and slopes upwards in the front. The scarf collar ties in a large bow under the chin.

Creation Of World Famous Designer

Outstanding among the lovely gowns is an evening ensemble of glittering silver tissue that seems to envelope the wearer in a luminous aura of brilliant light.

The outfit, designed by that world-famous fashion creator, Bernard Newman, is entirely accordeon-pleated. The under-dress has a fitted bodice and a short tunic and the three-quarter length coat, hung from a deep yoke, has wide accordeon-pleated sleeves tied at the wrists and a large jabot at the throat. Silver sandals, white gloves and a jewelled evening bag complete the ensemble.

FILM STAR FASHIONS

Flashes From Hollywood

Shorter gowns are appearing for evening wear. Irene Dunne is wearing a two-piece tailored formal suit which just touches the tops of her slippers.

One of the smartest handbags of the season is carried by Anne Shirley. It's a large blue bag in satchel style, made of white tweed with a blue overplaid and having a round, wooden handle.

Large, flat silver medallions, cut in petal shape with shining rhinestone centres, are used to trim the tailored revers of a smart black formal gown worn by Ann Southern.

Do You Know Where Spott Is?

The chances are that you do not, yet from this suburb of Cardiff, Wales, comes a message of hope for people who are suffering from any of the various ills arising from blood impoverishment.

Writing from her home at No. 9 Smith Street, Spott, Miss I. M. Jones states:—"For years I suffered from anaemia, I was always languid, nervous and irritable, and often had fainting fits. Last October I had a nervous breakdown, and was kept away from my work for over two months."

"I lost my appetite entirely. Fits of depression came over me and I used to cry on the slightest provocation. I lost weight to an alarming extent."

"I could not go out alone for fear of being seized with a fainting fit. I was utterly listless and had no interest in anything. I could not sleep at night. I was often overcome by violent headaches."

"My cousin advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after only one bottle of the pills I found my appetite returning. I persevered with the pills and soon I was able to sleep well, and got up in the morning bright and cheerful."

"I began to pick up some of my lost weight, my nerves grew steady, fainting fits no longer troubled me, and before long all my ailments were a thing of the past."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are just what you need if you are run-down and ailing. When the plentiful supply of rich, pure blood which these pills create is flowing in your veins your whole system becomes invigorated. They are obtainable from chemists everywhere.

AmusementsCinema Notes*"CLIVE OF INDIA"—KING'S THEATRE

The great pictures of to-day are war pictures without war.
Darryl F. Zanuck, who made "Clive of India," with Ronald Colman, his first $1,000,000 production for 20th Century Pictures, makes this seemingly paradoxical statement.

"I selected 'Clive,' he goes on to explain, "because the background has the sweeping breadth and dramatic brilliance of war without the roaring of cannon."

"The success of my previous production, 'The House of Rothschild,' proved the popularity of this type of film. The story centred around Napoleon's campaigns and his final downfall at Waterloo, yet Napoleon and his soldiers were seen and heard for only a few seconds on the screen.
"Wars are not so important of themselves, for defeated people rise to fight again. The effects of war on those people is the significant thing, the thing which makes great drama. Looking back over the big pictures of the past, we find not only 'The House of Rothschild,' but 'Cavalcade,' 'Seventh Heaven' and even 'Smilin' Thru' with war as an undercurrent."

"All Quiet on the Western Front" and "The Big Parade" were significant not so much for their big battle effects as for their protest against the inhumanity of war. The actual fighting scenes could have been eliminated to the extent that we minimise them to day, and the pictures still would have been great."

In "Clive of India," which exploits the daring and dramatic manner in which Robert Clive rose from the position of humble clerk to become England's greatest hero, the scenes by which he obtained his victories on the battlefield are confined to mere flashes.
"There is in the life of Robert Clive a greater drama than the stirring scenes of his conduct in battle. I wanted to find for Ronald Colman a story of really great breadth. When I saw on the London stage that private life story of Robert Clive, without any of the rattle and pomp of warfare, I knew I had found the story I was looking for. That is why I selected it as my first $1,000,000 production for 20th Century Pictures."

Loretta Young is seen opposite Colman as the lovely wife who inspired Clive's bold deeds, in this Joseph M. Schenck presentation, from a script by W. P. Lipscomb and R. J. Minney, authors of the London stage hit of the same name "Clive of India" is released through United Artists and is now showing at the King's Theatre.

"DOUBLE DOOR"—STAR THEATRE

This picture, which opens at the Star Theatre to-day, derives its title from the fact that all houses of Fifth Avenue have double portals as a sign of opulence and power.

The story concerns the activities of an eccentric old spinster, Victoria Van Brett, the tyrannical ruler of the family fortunes. When her attempt to destroy the romance of her younger half-brother is frustrated, she attempts to murder his bride. The discovery and defeat of her plot breaks her control over the family and frees the young couple to live their own lives.

The cast includes Mary Morris, Anne Revere, Evelyn Venable, Sir Guy Standing and Kent Taylor.

"THE TRAIL DRIVE"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

Ken Maynard and his wonder horse "Tarzan" are together again in Universal's exciting story of the West "The Trail Drive."

Besides a thrilling story, there are many scenes which will live long in the memory of those who see this film. Thousands of reckless riders are just a few. Included in the cast are Charles Bickel, William Gould, Frank Baker, Bob Kortman and Fern Emmett.

Neither records nor glory inspired the trans-Atlantic flight of 21-year-old Juan Ignacio Pombo (Inca) of Santander, Spain. He flew the South Atlantic to visit and attempt to win the heart of Elena Rivero Corral (above), the Mexico City belle.

"BORDERTOWN"—ALHAMBRA THEATRE

Paul Muni, one of the greatest actors of the stage or screen, will be seen at the Alhambra Theatre to-day in the Warner Bros. production, "Bordertown," which is said to be the most powerful drama in which he has ever appeared.

The picture, suggested by Carroll Graham's novel, is a stark realistic picturisation of the colourful life in a town on the American border, with its night clubs and gambling resorts frequented by American millionaires and bored society women seeking diversion.

In this atmosphere Paul Muni, in the role of a foreign youth rises to riches and power as the proprietor of a fashionable night club and gaming hall. Handsome, magnetic, he is loved by two women, one a fiery adventuress who slays her husband to try to win him, and when scorned, charges him with the murder. The part is played by Bette Davis, who is said to surpass even her splendid performance in "Of Human Bondage."

The other woman in the triangular romance is an American society woman, who plays with the handsome young proprietor of the night club, a flirtation which the mad youth takes seriously and which ends in tragedy.

Margaret Lindsay, has the role of this woman. The entire cast is a talented one and includes such players as Eugene Pallette, Robert Barrat, Henry O'Neill, Gavin Gordon, Hobart Cavanaugh, William Davidson, Arthur Stone, Vivian Tobin and Soledad Himenez.

"FORSAKING ALL OTHERS"—ORIENTAL THEATRE

The combination of Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Robert Montgomery acting together in the same film for the first time, makes "Forsaking All Others," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer special which is showing at the Oriental Theatre to-day, one of the big hits of the year.

The triumvirate of Crawford-Gable-Montgomery is perfectly cast in the new comedy which has been adapted from the stage success of the same name without loss of a single bright line of dialogue.

The locale is Park Avenue, which has given the art directors an opportunity to create some of the most beautiful settings ever seen on the motion picture screen.

As a light comedienne, left standing at the altar one minute and pursued by two handsome men the next, Joan Crawford is at her best. This is the first time Joan has attempted pure comedy and she turns in a brilliant job. Gable and Montgomery are both well-known exponents of light comedy and they vie to outdo one another with the many hilarious situations of the story.

BRIDGE NOTESSERIES OF OVER RUFFS

By Ely Colbertson

The importance of the opening lead against Small Slam contracts cannot be overestimated. Everyone knows that the tempo of a hand can be won or lost for the defence on the choice of the opening lead. If the defensive player is fortunate enough to choose that suit in which he and his partner can subsequently take a trick, he will in all likelihood defeat the contract, for the Declarer's stopper will be removed before the one sure stopper that the defensive side happens to hold. If the opening lead is not well chosen, the Declarer will in most instances be able to play the hand in the safest possible manner and be able to set up his side suit for discards and draw the trumps without any fear that the adversaries will be able to cash the setting trick.

The fact that the best opening lead is chosen, however, does not necessarily mean the defeat of the contract. On the hand below, which took place in an early round knockout match of the Masters' Team-of-four Championship, the Declarer was still able to fulfill his contract despite the fact that the defence made the best possible opening lead. He did this by never touching trumps until a point was reached where the defence was left with nothing but a high trump and all the Declarer's losers had been taken care of.

WHO WILL WIN AT THE WIMBLEDON TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS?

MISS RUMJAHN SAVES CHINESE R.C.

DISORGANISED TEAM'S NARROW WIN

MATCH SHOULD HAVE BEEN DRAWN

(By "Referee")

THE Kowloon Cricket Club "A" team lost their last chance of clinching the Mixed Doubles Lawn Tennis League when they failed to put a spoke in the Chinese Recreation Club's wheel when playing on their own courts yesterday.

Beaten by 8 sets to 1 in their first encounter at Causeway Bay, the K.C.C. lost the return match yesterday by 5 sets to 4, despite the fact they were playing a team weakened by the absence of Mrs. Chiu Tsun-chiu and Mrs. Lo Tung-fan, who are under doctors' orders. Had Teddy Fincher won his service in the ninth game of his set against Lee Wai-tong and Miss Rumjahn, when leading 5-3, the encounter would have been left drawn and thus given a ray of hope to the champions, the U.S.R.C. As it was he lost his service and the Chinese pair actually led 6-5 only to drop the twelfth game.

It can safely be said that the last-minute recruitment of Miss R. Rumjahn, the L.R.C.'s leading lady player, saved the day for the Chinese. In partnership with Lee Wai-tong she was responsible for the necessary two sets for victory.

CRAIGENGOWER MAY HOLD CHINESE SECOND STRING

There is only one interesting "A" Division Lawn Tennis League fixture on to-day's programme, that between the champions, the Chinese Recreation Club, and the Kowloon Cricket Club at King's Park.

The Chinese are making no changes from their previous combinations and should win all their sets.

A close encounter should be seen at the Valley, where Craigengower entertain the Chinese second string.

Miss Wethered Plays Against Gene Sarazen

New York, May 31. Miss Joyce Wethered, who won the English ladies' open golf championship in an 18 holes exhibition match at Glen Head, Long Island. The match finished all square.

A gallery of 1500 followed the players round, and Miss Wethered, who was naturally eager to make a creditable debut, appeared to be slightly nervous. This had its effect on her putting.

RUMJAHN BEATEN

ARCULLI WINS WITH EASE IN OPEN SINGLES

1934 Finalist Too Erratic

LED THROUGHOUT GAME

(By "SKIP")

D. Rumjahn, last year's finalist in the Open Lawn Bowls Singles Championship, met his Waterloo at the hands of his clubmate, E. el Arculli, on the C.S.C.C. green, being beaten by 12 shots in a game which never lacked interest, despite the ease with which he was defeated.

Arculli showed himself to be the superior player from start to finish, and never at any time were his chances of winning the match endangered. Some of the heads were more than ordinarily close, the woods being clustered to within one foot of the jack.

Arculli's greatest asset was his ability to keep his length after he had found it, which he very often did with his first wood. On the other hand Rumjahn would send up a good first bowl and then be wide, short or narrow, with his remaining three.

TWO BOWLS GAMES DOWN FOR TO-DAY

Basa To Meet Brown On Recreio Green

WHYTE FAVOURED TO WIN

Two more games in the Colony Lawn Bowls Singles Championship, which were postponed last Tuesday, will be played this afternoon, and both of them should provide very close finishes.

R. Basa, one of Craigengower's most reliable players, meets J. C. Brown, the Bowling Green skip, and runner-up for the Singles title in 1927. Both men are playing very well just now, and have the additional advantage of being very old hands at the game.

J. J. Whyte, of Talkoo, meets a close rival in H. Rosario of the Recreio, and here again a good game is anticipated. Taking everything into consideration, however, it is believed that Whyte will manage to secure entry into the next Round. This match will take place on the Kowloon C. C. green.

The following is to-day's programme:
H. Rosario v J. J. Whyte (Kowloon Cricket Club)
R. Basa v J. C. Brown (Recreio)

HOLDERS' DIFFICULT PROPOSITIONS

AMERICA'S CHALLENGE IN THE DOUBLES

VON CRAMM MAY WIN SINGLES

(By HELEN JACOBS)

London, June 1.

THE decision of Miss Helen Wills to play at Wimbledon this year has made prospects doubly interesting and forecasts difficult.

Four contests concern the tennis world more than any others—the Davis Cup matches, the French championships, the English championships, and the American championships. The winners of these are considered the best of the tennis field for the years in which they win them.

EUROPE IS NATURALLY MORE INTERESTED IN THE TOURNA-MENTS PLAYED IN ENGLAND AND ON THE CONTINENT, BUT ENGLAND MUST TAKE A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF INTEREST IN THE AMERICAN CHAMPIONSHIPS, SINCE ITS CHAMPION, FRED PERRY, HAS HELD THE MEN'S SINGLES TITLE FOR TWO YEARS.

The question that arises now is: "Will the holders of these various championships be able to retain them this year?"

With regard to the Davis Cup it seems likely, but not certain, that England will retain her honours. I was inclined to think, after Fred Perry's Australian tour, that he had had too much tennis, and that his concentration was too markedly divided between amateurism and professionalism to permit the necessary consolidation of his forces.

This opinion was proved extremely erroneous after the Bournemouth hardcourt championships, the first opportunity of seeing him play that I have had since last September.

Impressive Tennis

During this tournament I was impressed by the game he obviously had in reserve for only the most important stages of his matches, and never did I feel that he was fully extended. Against even as great a player as Jack Crawford this ability of Fred's to hold a certain amount of mental and physical energy in reserve will be a telling asset.

Crawford, von Cramm, Allison, and Wood are, I think, Perry's strongest rivals in both the Davis Cup matches and at Wimbledon, and yet these players, to defeat him, must be able to sustain their best tennis through five sets if necessary, taking advantage of Perry's occasional lapses.

Though share prices were again on the upward trend, the volume of business done yesterday was very small, the demand being, however, greater than supply. The fixed interest security market remained neglected, prices being little changed. A certain demand for gold mortgage bonds arose, resulting in an advance in some categories of half a point. Call money was at 2½ to 3%.—Trans-Ocean Service.

MORATORIUM DECLARED ON GERMAN DEBTS

REGULATIONS OUTLINED.
A Trans-Ocean Service message states that the Reichsbank announces that as the foreign currency reserves have recently been weakened considerably, the transfer restrictions will have to continue for the period from July 1, 1935, to June 30, 1936. The interest payments on long and medium-term loans falling due within this period and paid into the conversion office for German foreign debts will be subject to the following regulations:—

1. A cash transfer will not take place.
2. Every holder of an interest certificate issued against a Reichsmark payment made by a German debtor is entitled to demand a consolidation of debt certificate bearing 3 per cent. interest and 3 per cent. amortisation yearly up to January 1, 1940. The capital, interest and amortisation are guaranteed by the Reich.
3. The holders of interest certificates are on the same footing as other interest creditors, and as those entitled to dividends and other claims to regularly recurring payments, which, according to the law of June 3, 1933, must be paid in to the conversion office.
4. The amortisation payments and capital repayments will be treated by a special decree, but in the meantime transfers are suspended.—Trans-Ocean Service.

Lightening Of Tax Burdens

In view of the heaviness of such surcharges, the National Financial Conference passed a resolution to make great reductions, and on June 8 last year the National Government issued an order prohibiting the levying of any additional land tax surcharges. Mr. Kao informed his audience.

Reductions in such land tax surcharges during the past year in various provinces, municipalities and districts amounted to $8,441,484, according to Mr. Kao.
Other kinds of exorbitant taxes abolished during the past year numbered over 3,000, amounting to $23,458,559. Together with reductions of the land tax surcharges, they made a total of $31,900,043. Prior to the abolition, the number of exorbitant taxes imposed upon one single article was sometimes alarming. Thus over 10 kinds of miscellaneous levies were imposed upon a pig from its birth to its sale, Mr. Kao revealed.

Future Programme

Referring to the future programme, Mr. Kao pointed out that further reductions in land tax surcharges and the abolition of still other miscellaneous levies are under contemplation by the Ministry. It is estimated that when this is accomplished, $12,174,150 more will be removed from the burden of the people, making a total of $44,074,138, together with those already abolished.

As a measure of supervising local finance, Mr. Kao said, the Ministry instructed the various District Governments to draw up their budgets with great care. In accordance with the instructions of the Ministry, special financial meetings were convened by the various Provincial Governments at which matters relating to budget-drafting were discussed in detail. Up to the present, Mr. Kao added, over 300 districts in the various provinces had submitted their budgets for the current fiscal year to the Ministry.

After their budgets are approved by the Ministry, the authorities of the various districts are held responsible for making all appropriations in strict accordance with their respective budgets. They are strictly prohibited from imposing any levies upon the people. Severe punishment will be meted out to those violating this ruling, Mr. Kao asserted.

Steps To Readjustment

In view of the fact that the principal income of local Governments is from the land tax, the Ministry has exerted its utmost for its readjustment during the past year, in order to bring about the greatest proceeds to meet local expenses.

As a preliminary step toward readjustment, the various Provincial Governments were instructed to enforce land registration, to ascertain the areas of farm lands in their respective provinces. To attain accuracy three steps are taken in the registration. A brief survey of the areas of farm lands in various districts is to be undertaken by the district authorities. The chiefs of various counties and villages are to report to the districts authorities the area of farm lands in their respective counties and villages. Simultaneously, the landlords are required to register with the authorities the land in their possession.

Satisfactory Results

Very satisfactory results have been reported by provinces where land registration has been made, Mr. Kao declared. In the Yihang district in Kiangsu, an addition of about 42,450 mu of farm lands has been registered; in the Tangshu district in Anhwei, about 200,000 mu; and in the Hsiao district in Kiangsu, about 1,000,000 mu.

In accordance with the regulations governing land registration, promulgated by the Central Government, the increase in the proceeds of land tax as a result of additional farm lands registered is to be appropriated for meeting the deficit of the district treasury caused by the reduction or abolition of land tax surcharges, as well as to defray the expenses of social welfare work. In this manner, Mr. Kao observed, land registration, when efficiently undertaken, lightens the financial burden of the people, besides expediting social enterprises.

"Rubber: Futures were quiet, whilst sellers of Actual were reluctant. The peak of primary shipments is believed to have passed. Total sales: 350 lots.

"Flash: Steel mill activity during the past week is estimated at 37.7 per cent. of capacity, compared with 38.3 per cent. the previous week.

The German
Agreement

The German dictatorship, of course, has at its disposal not only a very highly trained military staff, but a highly qualified diplomatic service. The most interesting development at the moment is the emergence of the professional assistant to take charge of the affairs of the Dritte Reich, and to adapt the very undiplomatic opinions of "Mein Kampf" to a world in which it is not practical politics to antagonise everybody at once. Herr Joachim von Ribbentrop, who has been negotiating in London, belongs, of course, to the professional class, and it is quite probable that he and Sir Samuel Hoare have between them succeeded in "breaking the ice over the rigid political situation on the Continent."

If that is so, the cracks may be expected to spread rapidly, for the frost was becoming oppressive and dangerous. Our own special interest is in the wider circumference that the cracks may be expected to reach, for Herr von Ribbentrop has already shown that he knows well how dangerous it is for the outlying portions of the world, including the Far East, that Europe should be entirely absorbed in her own affairs and unable to speak with any authority when the issues of peace and war hang in the balance in Asia. "Europe," he says, "has a mission for the whole of the civilised world." It is some years since Europe has remembered that.

The actual nature and scope of the break in the ice is worth examining, for however unwilling some of us may be to abandon the ideal of a unanimous and collective security, the main thing is to achieve the results that we all want. Like the old Diet of Poland, the Council of the League has required a unanimous vote before any official action can be taken. The temptation to stop all progress when feelings run high, or at least to demand some sort of quid pro quo for a doubtful vote, has always proved the ruin of that system, and it is quite certain that most of the members would not trust their fate to the chances of a mere majority vote. There has been no change over of opinion as a result of the long debates, the views of France have remained those that M. Clemenceau nailed to the mast at Versailles, and the Allies who tried to influence him to gain have always pressed the collection that they urged then. Reparations were only got rid of after they had done the maximum of damage; and the special discriminatory provisions that were well enough for a period of recovery after the war have never been amended. A time limit would have saved the revival of the military spirit, and avoided the appearance that the League was a combination of the victors to enforce the penalties of defeat on the vanquished. Just as reparations only disappeared by the worst of all possible methods—repudiation—so has the one-sided disarmament disappeared only by the action of Germany in proclaiming that she would no longer regard those clauses as part of the Treaty. By the complete intransigence of France, to which she had persuaded her post-war Allies to accede, she lost all chance of bargaining and the moral effect of concession. It seems that the Council is not capable of dealing with major questions of hot controversy—just the questions that cause the most devastating wars, and keep Europe in a state of bubbling irritation that recently was very near the boiling point.

Last week we enumerated Der Fuehrer's thirteen points. It must not be supposed for a moment that a settlement of the whole lot has been made. There is the stuff of some years' negotiations in that long programme. The point is that the removal of the special discriminations against Germany enables her to begin to negotiate without any sacrifice of self-respect. There is no trace of disloyalty to France in signing an agreement which recognises that the period of post-war limitation, which has usually lasted about five years, can be brought to an end after fifteen years. That it would have been ended by violence if nothing had been done has been clearly indicated by the recent war mentality of all the nations, as shown by preparation for gas attacks, and the new armaments race.

The moral of it all is that the League cannot afford to be too ambitious until it is genuinely worldwide, and its decisions receive far more respect than they do at present. It is admirable as a forum of discussion, as a means of collecting impartial facts and figures, and for drafting regulations for common purposes, to which nations can voluntarily accede, such as the suppression of dangerous drugs and white slave traffickers, and we hope later on the trade in munitions. For its fulfilment of the bigger ideals it must, at present, be content to rely on national pact and guarantee made by those who are so closely interested that their own safety will force

BLESSING IN DISGUISE

According to the waiters at a big London restaurant, absent-mindedness can be a blessing in disguise for some people.

On one occasion a man walked into the restaurant with the aid of a crutch and a stout ash stick. He was seen to sit down at a table with a friend and become engaged in a heated argument.

Finally the man pushed back his chair, and, red with anger, he stamped out of the dining-room.

He completely forgot his crutch and stick, and never troubled to return for them.

IT HAPPENED IN UGANDA

Many curious examples of "English as she is spoke" have been culled from time to time from newspapers published in Africa. The Uganda Guardian publishes items of Native News by our African correspondent, but adds, in brackets, the information that the news in question is "unedited".

"On 8/3/35 we started to be intervened by a most probably, lunatic woman standing uprightly in a dock of the Mengo Bazaar road junction giving hands to every passenger, even though being a pedestrian. She made us, whilst in a lorry, halt still though there were not any proceeding cars at the moment, and later permitted us to go off. She had been clothed in a barkcloth tied from neck to feet."

Your Daily Smile!

The Next Time

Driving down Dublin's main thoroughfare O'Connell Street (formerly Sackville Street), a motorist passed the traffic constable by the bridge on the wrong side.

Recalling him, the policeman asked: "Privat for did ye not go round me?"

The motorist said he was very sorry, but he had not noticed the officer was there.

"Well, now," the constable warned him, "just remember next time. Ye are to go round me whether I'm here or not!"

Obedient

Willie was almost through his reading lesson when he came to a word he could not pronounce.

"Barne," prompted the teacher.

Willie looked at his classmates and laughed.

"Barque, Willie!" exclaimed the teacher, harshly.

Willie, looking up at the teacher, finally cried out, "Bow-wow!"

No Tattle-tale

CAT BURGLAR AT

H.Q. Entered

Two wrist watches valued at $30 were stolen from the headquarters of the St. John's Ambulance Brigade at Tai Hang during the early hours of yesterday.

Mrs. B. Langley, who resides at the headquarters, reports that the robbery was committed between 3 a.m. and 5 a.m. by some person who gained entrance to the room by climbing up the drain pipe to the window.

Pleading guilty to having 38 counterfeit 5-cent pieces in their possession at Sham Shui Po, Ng Lam, a 25-year-old unemployed, and Wong Ngan, a 25-year-old unemployed, were each sentenced to three months' hard labour when they were charged before Mr. E. I. Wynne Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning.

They were to work together instead of becoming a permanent debating society like the "Discrimination" Conference, which can only show for its labours "a harvest of frayed nerves." A return to the old days when a unanimous Europe had no quarrels, authority was guaranteed, the Peace of the Orient

CHANNEL TRIP BY GLIDERFUEL COSTS LESS THAN SIX SHILLINGSFLYING DEVELOPMENTS OF THE FUTURE

(By Robert Kronfeld)

ROBERT KRONFELD, the Austrian gliding expert, recently completed a flight from Croissy to Paris in a motor glider provided with a 5 h.p. motor-cycle engine. In 1931 he won the £1,000 prize offered by the "Daily Mail" for the first gliding flight across the Channel and back.

My object in undertaking the London to Paris flight was to show that flying to-day is well within the means of the average person—just as cheap and every bit as safe as the small touring car.

My recent achievement was no fantastic stunt. I was simply showing how easy it is for anyone to fly. My wife has been among my many pupils, and she has learned to fly a glider in a few lessons, and was able to take over full command of a glider with a small motor like the one I used recently after only one week of tuition.

The glider I brought over with me is to be delivered to a French firm, who intend to build it in series for the French public. That shows the interest in these gliders which is being taken in France.

Interest in England

I must say that in England also I am continually being asked about gliders; and I do really think that it would be of immense use to the British public, not only for sporting purposes but also for the really important objective of making as many young people as possible air-minded, if the science of gliding were to become more widely known.

For young men and young girls I cannot think of any more useful and at the same time entrancing pastime than learning to use a glider.

A start may be made with a simple glider, and then the beginner may go on to a glider with a small motor—a runabout plane, as it might be called, such as the one I used in my Paris flight.

Remember that for that flight I used under four gallons of petrol, and some 6d. worth of oil! The journey thus cost me barely 5s. 6d.—far cheaper than if I had packed the machine up and delivered it as freight.

Not long ago I had to deliver just such a glider in France, and the carriage cost me nearly £19. Think of the difference! I came over for less than 6s.

The taxicab journey from Le Bourget aerodrome to Paris cost me more!

A Good Journey

I had a very good journey with good air conditions, but if I had had a contrary wind I should have got over just the same. With my machine I can fly extremely low, and can therefore seek an altitude where wind velocity does not hinder me.

My machine takes off in 30 yards, just like the majority of planes, but, instead of having to continue running in a straight line after rising, I can turn within the limits of my take-off field and gradually rise in a spiral, practically like an autogiro.

A field of 200 yards in length is quite sufficient for me to take to the air. I can land at 15 miles per hour, and therefore I need not fear a crash. Should I have to land on rough ground I simply sit down.

Now imagine what a wonderful sporting achievement it would be if we could have hundreds of gliding clubs in England and tens of thousands of young men and women gliders taking off from almost any flat field or piece of common ground, able to take an evening gliding flight for 30 or 40 miles out into the country and back, or go to Scotland for a week-end from Surrey.

Help by Ministries

When I landed in Paris my petrol tank was nearly full, empty I could have continued my journey for about another 250 miles, which would have taken me to near Geneva.

Both the British and the French Air Ministries, it should be pointed out, are eager to help this new movement in cheap flying, and it is thanks to both of them that I was able to obtain the necessary permits without difficulty.

There are heaps of people who want to fly but who cannot do so because of the cost. They must have a cheap machine on which they can rely. In trying to create this cheap plane, small wing loading has been made a feature, as experience has proved that machines with a light weight per square foot are extremely safe.

With the machine with which I crossed over recently—a B.A.C. Drone—all kinds of risky things can be done which could not be attempted with an ordinary plane. There is no danger of stalling.

A flight of 800 to 1,000 miles would be possible with this same machine equipped with a bigger tank.

Machine Described

I may point out that the B.A.C. Drone is fitted with a 500 c.c. Douglas engine developed out of a standard motor-cycle. It is practically the same as that of the motor-cycle, but with small modifications for aviation purposes.

The glider which I have just delivered cost £275. The French glider company, however, with the subsidies which are given for such craft by the French Air Ministry, hope to be able to deliver to their client a glider built in series at from something like £150 to £180.

That is the proper spirit. There is no doubt that we are now in the Flying Age. For the spirit and knowledge of flying to be spread everywhere among our youth we want flying gliders to be available for them as cheaply as a runabout car, and soon, perhaps, almost as cheaply as a motor-cycle.

INTERNATIONAL COMMERCIAL CONGRESS OPENS

68 ORGANISATIONS REPRESENTED

WORLD TRADE CHANGES OUTLINED IN PARIS

CHINA MAIL SPECIAL
Paris, To-day.

The eighth congress of the international Chambers of Commerce opened here yesterday in the presence of President Lebrun, who welcomed the thousands of delegates from the most important trading nations in the French capital. Altogether delegations from 48 countries and 68 international organisations will take part in the deliberations.

After pointing to the changes which have been taking place in the structure of world trade since 1933, the President of the International Chamber, M. van Blijssing, dwelt on the probable future developments necessitated by the changed outlook. The general secretary of the organisation, M. Pierre Vlasseur, then reported on the activities of the Chamber in the past two years, and finally the Secretary of State of the Ministry of Commerce, M. Blaisot, addressed the gathering on behalf of the French Government.

The congress began its deliberations sub-divided into three groups yesterday afternoon, when the problems of distribution, air traffic and air mail, as well as the situation created by the arrival of new competitors in the world's markets, were among the matters discussed by the delegates, while various problems pertaining to stabilisation and currencies will be the chief subject of to-day's session. Production and trade policy, the problems of the interchange of goods and capital, the co-operation of railways with motor transport, as well as the crisis in the mercantile marine will be other matters that will demand the attention of the congress.

The German delegation is headed by the President of the Publicity Office of the German Director of Business, Herr Reichard, who will speak on international publicity methods—Trans-Ocean Service.

EPSTEIN AND THE ACADEMY

No Longer Desires Membership

Membership of the Royal Academy is no longer sought by Mr. Jacob Epstein, who has written asking that his name be withdrawn from the list of candidates.

The trouble has arisen over the 18 statues erected by Epstein for the old British Medical Association headquarters in the Strand, now the premises of the Southern Rhodesian Government, which considers the statues "unsuitable" and intends to remove them.

Sir William Llewellyn, President of the Academy, and the Council have declined to sign an appeal for their preservation. They are reported to have said that it was not an Academy affair.

ITALY TO LEARN GERMAN AGAIN

Only Italian Teachers To Be Employed

Rome. The Italian Government has decided to re-establish in the whole of the Upper Adige region the teaching of the German language, which had been suspended since the war.

In all the communes of the province of Bolzano German classes will be set up and teaching will be given free. The authorities will begin with the large towns and afterwards will take in hand the smaller towns and villages.

The only stipulation is that the teachers shall be Italian.

WOMAN'S ACTION FOR SLANDER

Interesting Supreme Court Case

WIFE DESCRIBES HOSTILE SCENE AT WEDDING

An interest slander action was heard before His Honour the Puisne Judge, Mr. R. E. Lindsell, in the Supreme Court this morning, in which Chan Tau-tai, alias Lee Yan, married woman, is claiming $1,000 damages from Lee Sang and Lee Kwai-sang for alleged defamation of character.

Mr. H. L. Dennys, of Dennys & Co., appeared for the complainant, while the two defendants were represented by Mr. A. Silva.

In opening the case Mr. Dennys said that the incident in question had taken place at the marriage of the complainant on March 14, 1935, when the two defendants had made slanderous remarks pertaining to her virginity. Complainant's husband was then asked to leave the court as he will be called as a witness later.

Knife-Brandishing Story

In evidence complainant stated that she had been married at Shan Lau-lung village, where her husband had his house. She arrived in the bridal chair at approximately 4.30 p.m. and her husband was standing at the door when she arrived brandishing a knife and threatening her with it, accusing her at the same time of being pregnant. There were many people on the scene at the time of the incident, including the two defendants.

Lee Kwai-sang also had a knife in his hand and when he saw her he called out, "The woman who is pregnant has arrived, bad luck." She remonstrated and they then entered the house, where she heard the second defendant say to her husband, "You wicked fellow, did you have no wife in your former life that you must bring this woman, who is with child, into your house? But do not take her to the ancestral temples and let her worship our ancestors." Her father-in-law told the two men not to make a noise, but those present merely laughed at him.

Mr. Silva: "I put it to you that the knife-brandishing story is a product of your imagination." Witness: "No."

The hearing was adjourned at this point until this afternoon.

Twenty Cents Ring True And Cause Thief's Arrest

An accidental dropping of two 10-cent pieces led to the downfall of a 59-year-old unemployed, Chan Nam, who was sentenced to three months' hard labour by Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Police Court this morning for burglary at a Chinese restaurant, No. 211, Des Vaux Road West.

Detective Sergeant Kinnear, appearing for the prosecution, stated that the "place" which was a combined tea shop and boarding house, was closed at 1.30 a.m. yesterday. The doors were locked and the lock was to sleep. Two hours later one of the lock was

YUGOSLAV GOVERNMENT ESTABLISHED

CABINET CRISIS CONCLUDED

SOLUTION TO DIFFICULTIES ONLY PROVISIONAL?

CHINA MAIL SPECIAL

Belgrade, To-day. The Yugoslavian Cabinet crisis has ended, M. Milan Stoyadinovich, who has been Finance Minister not only in the last but in several preceding Cabinets, having succeeded yesterday in obtaining a full complement of Ministers for the new Government. It consists of the following:

Premier and Minister for Foreign Affairs: M. Stoyadinovich, a former Serbian Radical.
Minister of War: General Sifonovic.
Minister of Interior: M. Korochetz, formerly of the Slovenian People's Party.

Minister of Transport and Communications: M. Spaho, formerly of the Party of Bosnian Musulmans.
Minister of Public Works: M. Popic, Radical.

Minister of Finance: M. Letitra, a former Finance Minister.
Minister of Social Affairs and Health: M. Preka, of the Croats.
Minister of Agriculture: M. Stanovics.

Minister of Justice: M. Auer, of the Croats.
Minister of Air: M. Wrobanics, of the Croats.

Minister for Youth Training: M. Komnenovic.
Minister of Religion: M. Stoschewics.

Ministers without Portfolio: MM. Jankowics and Behmen.
The Cabinet was sworn in at 5 p.m. yesterday.

This solution is frankly regarded here as merely provisional. The fact that MM. Spaho and Korochetz were both induced to support M. Stoyadinovich is considered a good omen, because it assures the support of the Bosnian Mohammedans and the Slovenian Clericals.

DR. MATCHES OMITTED

Unfortunately the inclusion of Dr. Matchecs, leader of the Croatian Opposition, was not achieved, despite the considerable efforts made by the Prince-Regent Paul and General Zivkovic. Dr. Matchecs returned to Agram on Saturday, where his followers persisted in demanding a neutral Government pledged to early free and secret elections to a constitutional Parliament.

The Croats do not regard themselves as a party but as representatives of the Croat people, and decline negotiations with any party or with a Government formed without their co-operation, and they declare themselves as only prepared to negotiate with the Crown and the army—Trans-Ocean Service.

She stated that at the time she was not pregnant and, in fact, had never been so.

Defendants Unknown To Her

In answer to a question put by Mr. Silva, cross-examining, witness stated that she had not previously known the defendants. When asked about the incident in which her husband brandished the knife and threatened her, witness stated that her husband had not had a knife; he was not on the scene at the time of her arrival.

When she entered the house her husband was in the parlour and so she went to the cubicle which she was to use as a bedroom. Her husband followed her in and then struck her.

Mr. Silva: "I put it to you that the knife-brandishing story is a product of your imagination." Witness: "No."

The hearing was adjourned at this point until this afternoon.

To-day's Short Story

A DAY'S WOOLING

By Erskine
Caldwell

WHEN Tuffy Webb woke up that morning, the first thing he saw was his new straw hat hanging on the back of the cane-bottomed chair beside the bed. The red, orange and blue silk band around the hat looked as bright in the sunshine as the decorations in the store windows in town on circus day. He reached out and felt the rough crown and brim, running his fingers over the stiff brown straw. He would never have to step aside for anybody in a hat like that. That was all he needed to get the world by the tail.

"Maybe that won't knock a few eyes out," Tuffy said, throwing off the covers and leaping to the floor. "They'll all be cross-eyed from looking at it."

He placed the hat carefully on his head and walked over to the mirror on the wall. The new straw hat looked even finer, Sunday morning, than it had Saturday night, when he tried it on in the store.

"When Nancy sees this lid, she'll come tumbling," Tuffy said, stepping back and tilting the hat a little on one side of his head and winking at himself under the brim. He walked past the mirror several times, free and easy in his loose knee-length night-shirt, turning his eyes to see himself in passing. It was easy to get up courage in a hat like that.

"I could have all the girls after me now, if I wanted them," he said to himself.

Tuffy got dressed in a hurry and made a fire in the cookstove. He pulled the hat down carefully over his head so it would not fall off and hit the door while he was cooking breakfast.

During all the time he was in the kitchen he kept thinking to himself that he would not have to keep hatch much longer after that, not after Nancy saw him in his new hat. She would be tickled to death to marry him now, the first time she saw him walking up to her house with the straw sailor tilted over one ear, sort of like a cock's comb that always looked like it was going to fall off but never did.

After breakfast Tuffy had to drive the cows to the pasture on the other side of the creek, because it had become time for them to have a change of feed and the grass over there was ready for grazing.

TO-MORROW'S STORY

To-morrow's story will be
"Heroes Of Inishoole," by Nina Constrain.

He started off with his hat on his head but he got to thinking about it and finally decided he ought to leave it at the house. Sometimes a yearling took to heels and bolted off into a thicket, and he did not like to think of taking any chances of having the hat fall off into the briars and mud and maybe being trampled by the cows. Now that he was thinking about it he remembered seeing a cow chew up a straw hat once and swallow it.

He hurried back to the house and hung it on the cane-bottomed chair beside the bed.

Tuffy got back from the pasture at about eleven o'clock, and he changed his clothes right away, putting on his coat and the hat. After that he still had almost an hour to wait before he could leave home, because he did not wish to get to the Millers' while they were eating dinner. If he did that, one of the Millers would be certain to say that he had got there then to get something to eat.

He walked out on the porch and leaned against the railing for a while. The sun was almost directly overhead and there was not a cloud in sight.

He knew he could not have chosen a finer day to go calling on Nancy in a new straw hat. There was not a single drop of rain in the whole sky above.

"This would be a dandy time to speak to Nancy about my getting married," he said, going out into the yard and walking first around the chinaberry tree and then around the willow. "All I'd have to do would be to ask her, and I know already what Nancy will say. She's just as willing as I am, and she knows it. It wouldn't do her any good to try to show otherwise."

Tuffy learned against the willow, picking at the bark with his thumbnail.

"If I go right up to her and say, 'Nancy, how about me and you hitching up together?' she'll say, 'When, Tuffy?' and I'll say, 'The sooner the better suits me.' Then she'll say, 'Nothing would please me more.' That's all there will be to it, and it'll be all planned and settled. All I'll have to do is get a preacher to marry us, and then me and Nancy'll be married for a fare-you-well. Getting married wouldn't take long, maybe no longer than to-morrow noon. We'll probably start right in to-morrow some time. That's none too soon for me, and I know it won't be none too soon for Nancy."

Tuffy went over and sat on the woodpile.

"I'll go over there to old Berry Miller's and walk right up to where they're all sitting on the porch and lose no time about it. Berry'll probably want to know what I came for all dressed up like this in a coat and in a new straw hat, and I'll soon tell him, too. Well, I'll say, 'I came to marry Nancy, Berry. How do you like that?' He and her are getting married right now. He won't seem me a bit, no matter what he says. He might have some little fault to find to begin with, but there's no objection I know about that's good enough to stop me from going ahead and getting married to her."

It is what the notable women wear, not what the fashion designers prefer, that makes the styles. Here the trend of the mode is exemplified by (l. to r.) Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettger, daughter of the President, shown at the races; Grace Moore, opera-movie singer, and Katharine Cornell, actress. The latter two were snapped sailing for Europe. Note that all three favour the small hat, and that Mrs. Boettger is taking no heed of the attempt by Paris to lengthen skirts.

Nancy giggled and hid her face against her sister's shoulder. Tuffy blushed again.

"I didn't have this new hat then, though," he said. "So you didn't?" Berry said. "That is right, isn't it? That hat looks so natural on your head that I forgot all about it. But you did have on a coat that day, didn't you?"

Tuffy nodded, digging the toe of his shoe into the yard.

"I wish you had come by a little sooner," Berry said. "It's pretty late now to get any of the good part of the melons. The leavings ain't much to offer a body. But, of course, now if you ain't particular, just go and help yourself."

One of the boys kicked a piece of rind across the porch and it fell into the yard near Tuffy's feet. He looked at it, all covered with sand.

"Where you going, Tuffy?" Henry asked him.

"Nowhere much," Tuffy said. "How about me and you going off a piece?" said Henry, winding. "There's some easy pickings on Sunday afternoons over beyond Hardpan."

Tuffy glanced at Nancy. There was a peculiar look on her face that made him uneasy. The garter line on her legs wavered in his sight when she rocked slightly in her chair. He dropped his eyes to the ground once more.

"I don't reckon I can right now," he told Henry, blushing red all over.

The two girls began whispering to each other. Every once in a while Nancy glanced up at Tuffy, and then she quickly looked the other way.

Tuffy took off his hat and fanned his face with it.

"It's about time to do some thinking about a little foxhunting, ain't it, Tuffy?" Berry said. "These nights now are beginning to have a little nip in them, along about midnight, and the foxes will be running before you know it. Anyway, it don't hurt none to sort of warm up the hounds. They've been laying around here all summer and have got as lazy as can be. I been thinking lately of going out some night, pretty soon and give them a short run."

Tuffy nodded his head, but he did not say anything.

"I been thinking about making a trade of some kind for a couple more hunters," Berry said. "That Blackie is still a little lame from last year, and that Elsie is weighted down with pups. That Rustus looks like he takes to cold-trailing more and more every year, and I'm a little upset. I don't reckon it would do any harm to make a trade of some kind, if I could find exactly what I'm looking for. I've got a mule that's stove-up pretty bad, and I figure I need hunting dogs a lot more now than I do. A blamed stiff-legged mule."

Tuffy glanced up at Nancy, looking as if he were listening with something to say. He looked at her so long that she began to get impatient, and bent the stretched hem and held it down. He could do no more than swallow hard and finish red all over. It made his skin feel prickly under the heavy coat when she looked at him.

Clyde sat up and slid down to the edge of the porch. He sat swinging his legs over the edge and looking at Tuffy. Tuffy was becoming more and more uncomfortable. He had been standing for half an hour in the hot sun, and he caught himself swaying on his feet.

"I sure admire that new straw hat of yours, Tuffy," Berry said. "Especially that all-coloured pretty band around it."

Tuffy looked desperately at Nancy, and then glanced at the rest of the family. Everyone, except Nancy, stared right back at him. Nancy hung her head when their eyes met.

Henry crossed the yard between him and the house, taking something out of his pocket. He began pulling on it, making it snap like elastic. When he stopped in front of Tuffy, Tuffy looked to see what Henry was playing with. It was a girl's garter, bound in pink silk and tied in a bow with a red rosebud sewn into it. Tuffy jumped as if he had been pricked with a pin.

Tuffy backed off, taking short steps towards his car.

"Not going so soon?" Berry said. "Why, it hardly seems like more than a minute ago when you got here."

Tuffy stopped. Henry had kept up with him, snapping the garter. He put one end against Tuffy's arm, pulled the other end back a foot or two, and turned it loose. Tuffy jumped when the elastic stung him.

He looked at the porch where Nancy was. She had sat upright in the chair, leaning slightly forward, and stopped rocking. The starched flare of her skirt had straightened out once more, and he was glad she wore yellow garters. He started backing away again. Henry followed him, springing the elastic rosebud-trimmed garter at him.

"Let's me and you ride over beyond Hardpan," Tuffy urged. "It won't be no trouble at all to find us a couple of girls, and we can make a lot of headway on a Sunday afternoon. How about it, Tuffy, huh?"

Tuffy backed away faster, snaking his head. When he got to the tree where his car was, he turned around and jumped into the front seat.

Nancy ran into the house. She could be heard crying all the way to the back porch.

When Tuffy got his car started, Berry got up and walked out into the yard. He watched the automobile disappear over the hill, trying to turn his ear away from Henry's cursing.

"I hate to see a man rush off like that," Berry said. "I'd have sworn he came here for some purpose to begin with."

He stood with his back to the house, while Clyde left the porch and crossed the yard to get some more watermelons for cool in the bottom of the well.

ALL-STAR CLASSIC AT CLEVELAND

"We have money orders and checks from the four corners of the country—from Pejeyscot, Me., to Scappoose, Ore. and from Ishpeming, Mich., to the Saddle Bunch Keys, of Florida.

"This game is bringing people to baseball who probably haven't seen one in years. I was born and raised at Youngstown, and believed that I knew my Ohio, but here are applications from towns that I never heard of."

Evans thumbed through the requests.

"Washingtonville, Greentown, Phalanx, Apple Creek, Freedom Station, Magnolia. I didn't know they were on the map. Chances are that they aren't. Here's an order for four choice ones from Justus. The entire town must be coming. Here's another new one on me—Daisytown, Pa."

Stadium Dashed

The City of Cleveland is donating the use of the stadium. Every nickel outside of the actual cost of staging the contest, the major item of which is the cost of transporting the players, goes to the Association of Professional Baseball Players of America, which looks after sick, crippled, and indigent players, and plans a home for them.

The first all-star game in Chicago in 1933 netted the fund $45,000, and the one of last July in New York $40,000. This year's production should yield the fund more than twice the latter amount.

Nation-Wide Selection

Against the participants will be selected by a nation-wide newspaper poll. Joe Cronin and Bill Terry evoked adverse criticism last year by their failure to follow the balloting to the letter, but after all, practically all of the standouts were inserted into the lineups at one time or another.

Ten or more luminaries in each loop who have yet to crash the all-star game bid fair to do so this trip.

National Leaguers in this class who merit the honour include Paul Dean and Billy Delaney, the youngest battery ever to appear in a world series, and the Cardinals' slugging first baseman, Jimmy Collins; Hal Schumacher and Joe Moore of the Giants; Curt Davis and Outfielders Johnny Moore and Ethan Allen, of the Phillies; and Limps Frey, brilliant boy shortstop of the Dodgers.

Schoolboy Rowe's Debut

Schoolboy Rowe will make his bow, and other American Leaguers who have yet to appear as all-stars and who are sure to be strong at the ball box include Wesley Ferrell, Hank Greenberg, Jo-Jo White, Hal Trosky, Frank Higgins, Bill Werber, Joe Vosmik and Roy Johnson.

The world series managers, Frankie Frisch and Mickey Vernon, will comment.

There will be the customary problems such as the one Cronin who managed the American Leaguers last July solved by naming Jimmy Fox at third base.

For instance, there is no place for either Greenberg or Trosky with Lou Gehrig still leading the junior wheel in practically everything but pitching effectiveness. Nor for Collins, with Terry still on his remarkable game and the National League runner-up in the batting with a cool 354.

Wonder if ... will catch by the way?

Babe Ruth, who appears so strange in National League livery after 20 heroic years in the American, undoubtedly will become the first all-star to complete for both circuits. An all-star game without the Bam will not be complete as long as his spindly legs are able to carry him about.

The baseball scene changes. More than one old favourite who appeared in both previous presentations is likely to be overlooked on this occasion. Chuck Klein is likely to be passed up, and so is Jimmy Dykes.

Even after last year's game at the Polo Grounds played to 50,000 and turned 15,000 more away, some National League magnates opposed the all-star game.

However, by this time even these must be convinced that the good the game does baseball makes up ten fold for the disruption of schedules.

The fans have taken charge of the fans' game to such an extent that it now is too late for even baseball magnates to walk out on their own charity.

AWARDS FOR BRAVERY IN ATLANTIC GALE

Rescue Of Usworth Crew Recalled

ALBERT MEDAL FOR MAN WHO PERISHED

London, To-day.—H.M. the King has made a posthumous award of the Albert Medal, given only in cases of exceptional gallantry and devotion, to Thomas Gibson, late cook of the s.s. Usworth, for life-saving at sea.

Pieces of plate and other awards have also been made to the masters and the various officers and members of the crew of the Belgian vessel s.s. Jean Jadot and the Cunard-White Star liner Ascania, who displayed great bravery and skill in saving the Usworth during a violent gale in mid-Atlantic last December.

Two members of the crew of the Jean Jadot were drowned when the lifeboat was capsized and posthumous awards have been made in their case. Gibson, the Usworth's cook, gave his life in trying to save a mess-room boy. He was a strong swimmer and was within a stroke or two of the lifeboat which the Ascania had launched when the boy cried for help and Gibson turned back for him, both being swept away.

Lifeboat Epic
The Ascania's lifeboat was commanded with great skill and courage by Lieutenant Pollitt, Royal Naval Reserve, junior third officer of the Ascania, in circumstances of extreme peril. It was several times nearly smashed by the Usworth or the Ascania.

The gale was so violent that oars, forced from the rowlocks, were blown out of the men's hands and all but six were broken, while the lifeboat, at one moment in the trough of the steep waves, was at the next level with the Usworth's boat deck.

Nevertheless, the remainder of the crew were taken off and with difficulty got aboard the Ascania. Mr. Pollitt, after what is officially described as a "heroic and remarkable rescue" was the last to leave the badly damaged lifeboat—British Wireless Service.

An unknown Chinese male was admitted to the Kowloon Hospital yesterday after having been "accidentally knocked down by a train at Shung Ping in Chinese Territory."

Martin Mooney, the New York American reporter, is taken to Tempe Prison in handcuffs after being sentenced to 30 days for contempt. He would not reveal the sources of his information in the sensational racket expose. Mooney was released after 10 minutes, pending appeal.

MR. EDEN'S MEETING WITH DUCE

There are signs in the Italian press, however, that while Italy is critical of the alleged independent manner in which Britain has acted and disapproves of the methods used in reaching agreement with Germany, the actual agreement is regarded with satisfaction.

According to the official view the Abyssinian question is not expected to be discussed, unless Mr. Eden has brought from the British Government concrete proposals to solve it. It is understood that the Italian Government would welcome any positive suggestion helping to solve the dispute by enabling Italy to attain certain territorial concessions.

BRIEF BRITISH REPLY

Paris, To-day.

A brief British reply to the French Government's note on the Anglo-German agreement has been received at the Quai d'Orsay. It suggests the utility of a naval conference before the end of the year in view of the expiration of the Washington Treaty.

It is expected that France will agree to the suggestion.—Reuter.

FRENCH WAR VETERANS VISIT STUTTGART

Efforts To Secure Understanding

IMPRESSIVE RECEPTION

—CHINA MAIL—SPECIAL

Stuttgart, To-day.—A noteworthy effort to promote a Franco-German understanding based on mutual respect and equality of rights began yesterday with the reception here of 50 French war veterans, who will be the guests for one week of the famous industrialist Robert Bosch, when they will visit many places of interest in Schwabia. All the guests were more or less seriously wounded during the world war.

Conspicuous among the hosts were Herr Robert Bosch himself, the regional leader, Herr Schmidt, and numerous leaders of the Steel Helmets and Reichswehr Generals. The guests belong to the war veterans' organisation, totalling 180,000 members.

Great enthusiasm was aroused by a telegram received from the Anglo-German congress at Brighton to the Franco-German congress at Stuttgart. The slogan adopted was: "Old front-trench veterans want peace, because they want their children to live."

Yesterday's proceedings ended with the singing of the Marseillaise and the two German national hymns, Deutschland Uber Alles and the Horst Wessel hymn.—Trans-Ocean Service.
